Frankfort Plant Destroyed by Fire

Fire of an unknown origin completely destroyed the concrete manufacturing plant and office of Walter Baumgartner of Frankfort Friday night. About 6 o'clock, Mr. Baumgartner came home, and upon opening the door of the plant, he was surprised to see the whole interior a mass of flames. He managed to get into the office part, however, and saved his books and other valuable papers. The local fire department was summoned, but the building was beyond saving. An auto truck and an Overland touring car were destroyed by the flames. There was no chance to save any of the machinery. The loss will run over $2,500 or $3,000, partly covered by insurance. Mr. Baumgartner is at a loss as to what could have caused the fire.

Frankfort Brotherhood Oyster Feed

The Brotherhood of the St. Peter's Evangelical church are planning on a big oyster supper, to be held at the church parlors, on the evening of December 8th. All the members have been invited to attend, as well as their friends.

FRANKFORT BAZAAR IS A REAL WINNER

The bazaar and supper given at the St. Peter's Evangelical church parlors on Wednesday night, by the Ladies' Aid Society of that church, was very largely attended, and over $500 were taken in, of which amount a very neat sum is clear profit.

Anti-Constitution Meeting at Mokena Wed. December 6

The voters of Mokena will be given an opportunity to hear an able discussion on why they should vote "no" on the new proposed constitution on December 12th at a public meeting to be held at the Hatch Hall, Mokena, on Wednesday evening, December 6th.

James Ley, prominent Joliet attorney will show why the new basic law does not benefit the farmer and workingman, but works in favor of the rich man. Mr. McCraney also of Joliet, is scheduled to give an address on the same subject. A male quartette will be on hand to furnish the musical part of the program. The meeting starts at 7:30 o'clock. All voters, men and women, are urged to attend this meeting and get facts as to why the proposed basic law should be voted down.

Union labor is solidly opposed to the proposed constitution on the ground that its provisions are detrimental to the workingman and enables the rich man to dodge his taxes in many instances. This week three judges of the Supreme Court have gone on record as opposed to the proposed basic law.

In 1870, when the present constitution was adopted, the people were given the opportunity to vote on nine separate propositions, any of which they might accept or reject. No such choice is given the people now as they must vote on the wheat and chaff as a whole.

The wage earner, the farmer as well as the average business man will secure no relief from their tax problems if the new draft is adopted.

Vote "no" on December 12.

Shall I Meet Thee; How Welcome Thee Aright?

In our December services we will endeavor to answer this question. Anxiety to have you hear us.

Rev. and Mrs. Kemnitz will celebrate their fifth wedding anniversary on Thanksgiving Day.

Dec. 1st, Rev. Kemnitz will attend Conference in Aurora.

Call the Corn

Blow, O Horn of Plenty, blow! Call the corn from crib and row; Call the corn and bid it be Banisher of misery!

Blow, O Horn of Plenty, blow! Make our thankful heart to know Just how sweet it is to dwell In this Land of All-goes-well.

Blow, O Horn of Plenty, blow! Those a-hunger soon must know That, though they have been denied, We will see them satisfied.

Blow, O Horn of Plenty, blow! Call the corn from crib and row; Call the corn and bid it be Banisher of misery!

Then a still, small voice will say: "Truly 'tis Thanksgiving day!"

William Herschel, in the Indianapolis News.

Quaint Song of Thanks

Through the hard days of the World war while the men were fighting, the women of America were working.

Waiting, ever courageously, Now that those days are over and the difficult aftermath needs careful handling.

Wherever there is need of brave and patient endeavor.

Post-war times are always trying ones. Hence it is with a little more sympathetic understanding than usual that we read the lines of a quaint old Thanksgiving hymn, bearing the date of 1783.

Its author is unknown, but its sentiment holds true today, though we may wish to change the name of our first President to that of some later leader.

The Lord above, in tender love, Hath saved us from our foes. Through Washington the thing is done: The war is at a close.

America has won the day Through Washington, our chief: Come, let us rejoice with heart and voice And bid good-by to grief.

Let us agree, since we are free, All needless things to shun; And lay aside all pomp and pride, Like our great Washington.

Though we do not proclaim this anonymous writer as a second Shakespeare, let us follow his counsel by bidding farewell to grief, by laying aside pride and pomp, and turning this Thanksgiving season into one in which we remember only our mercies and blessings, which are many.

"Come, let us rejoice with heart and voice, for what we have, if it be but little, helping the less fortunate, if it be an abundance."

Day of Joy

Thanksgiving day! Thanksgiving day! The plumage of celery are gay. Cranberry sauce is glowing red, The sun shines blessing on your head.

Thanksgiving day! Thanksgiving day! It's frier than the buds of May. Stewed and enlaid, sweet potatoes plump, A tukey perched on every stump.

Thanksgiving day! Thanksgiving day! Give me a dram-stick-gravy, too, And bid, I drink the health of you!

Mokena Man Recovers Auto Recently Stolen

William Marti, of Mokena, received a notice, Thursday, from the Chicago Detective Bureau that his Ford, which was stolen four weeks ago at Argo, had been found and was being held in Chicago for him to claim.

According to the story, William Marti had been to a dance at Argo one night about four weeks ago, and when he came out of the hall looking for his car, he found it had been stolen. Police at Argo and at Joliet were notified. About three weeks ago, the car was left in a prairie near Chicago by two young men who had told people living in the vicinity that the car was broken, and they did not have enough money to get it repaired. The detectives were notified, and they towed the car to Chicago. The Detective Bureau wrote to the Secretary of State to find out who was the owner of the number shown on the license plate, and as soon as the desired information arrived, Mr. Marti was notified. The batteries and other parts of the car had been stolen. The car was towed to Mokena Sunday by Hentsch Bros.

Mokena Mason Hurt By Fall

While Mr. Miller, mason, residing in the Scheiblich place, was at work on a concrete garage building on the Adam Schilling farm, near Tinley Park, Thursday, the scaffold broke, throwing Mr. Miller to the ground, resulting in a severe sprain of his leg. He was brought home in an auto by his brother, who resides at Tinley Park. The accident happened about the noon hour. Mr. Miller has been laid up since.

Oil Burners Used To Combat High Price of Coal

The oil burner proposition as a means of saving on the fuel cost has also invaded Mokena. Albert Hellmuth has just installed an oil burner in his stove in his harness shop the past week, and this burner, which burns 90% air and only 10% oil, throws a wonderful heat. It is said this burner will be cheaper to run than to buy coal. Thousands of these kinds of oil burners are being used all over the country this winter with the hope of obtaining cheaper fuel, since coal has reached such outrageous and unjustified profiteering prices. Of course, if these burners are successful, and if the people do save on fuel, it will not be long before the price of oil will be raised by the oil barons, and it will cost just as much to burn oil as it does to burn coal. By burning oil the public hopes to get back at the coal operators, as less coal will be consumed.

R. I. Restores Train To Rock Island

The Rock Island train which has been running between Chicago and Joliet, leaving Chicago at 7 o'clock a. m., has returned to its old schedule, and runs thru to Rock Island, as it formerly did. Going west in the morning, it is known as Train No. 17, and returning at night, east bound, it is train No. 18. This train was taken off the Rock Island run about two months ago, when it was said it did not pay to operate this train west of Joliet on account of so much traffic being taken from the railroad by the concrete roads and trucks, but the people of that territory have found out that nothing takes the place of the railroad train after all.

WORTH ALL STAR FOOTBALL TEAM CHOSEN!

By Carl Bodin All American "Shotback"

A BURLESQUE ON FOOTBALL

THE TEAM

Right end-Hazel Stromberg
Right tackle-Harold Ferrin
Right guard-H. Hildebrand Center-Roe Peterson
Left guard-Bruce Lucas
Left tackle-Perry Bishop

THE DOPE

Our team would not only be a winner, but, oh! boy, wouldn't it draw the crowds.

We needed a couple of classy, speedy ends; so we picked on Hazel Stromberg and Lillian Kaufman. They may play dirty in a scrimmage, but they certainly can upset any man who tries to get around their ends.

Harry Daniels, as a fullback and a line crasher—he was phenomenal "setback."

Ray Miller, rightfully a brilliant star-gazer, he is certain to be chosen "hunchback" on Bozo Snyder's team.

Scotty Little, as a butcher playing football, he certainly packs a wicked scrap in each brawny arm, scraps being absolutely essential to a lively game, neat scraps in particular. He is now playing "mudguard" on the powerful "flivver" machine.

Ed Rolfe, as a quarter-back, he was a marvelous general; by calling the right signals at the wrong time, he always guided his team to inevitable defeat. Having held the difficult position of "drawback" on the "crack" Engelwood High "Eleven" for 12 years, he is almost certain to be slated on this year's All-American as "pinchback."

Bill Little, fullback, the fastest back the game has seen in many a year, he also hits the line in a manner possessed only by himself and the Parker truck. He shall be all star "fallback" on the East Indian team.

Harold Ferrin, right tackle; as a garage man, he "soaked" the opposing teams for a "doctor's bill," and incidentally was appointed All-American "touchback."

Herbert Hildebrand, right guard, a veritable stone wall of defense; he "steered" many of the opposition to the bull-pen. He is now an All-Bavarian "comeback."

Roe Peterson, centre, "Uneeda Biscuit" he would cry as he slammed and crashed "thru that line" for yards and yards. He shall be appointed All-American "lame-back."

Bruce Lucas, left guard "Here is my pass," he screamed, flaunting the "Drover's Journal" identification in the faces of the enemy who immediately gave way before his furious onslaught. "His name leads all the rest." He is now all-American "Razorback."

Perry Bishop, left tackle and captain, the logical argument our "Captain Courageous" advanced, never failed to abash the enemy, who promptly gave ground before our line ripping attack. Needless to say he will be all-American "Kick Off."

George Plahm, quarterback. This lad's "unique" punting won us the short end of many a score, high kicks, 100 yards or more, (50 yds. up and 50 yds. down), and to score many a blocked kick, thus winning the game for the enemy. He is now all American "sick-back" on Rudolph Volcano's notorious team.

Mokena Postmaster Urges exchange of stamps For Treas. Certificates

"It is to be hoped that every person who can do so will exchange War Savings Stamps, soon to fall due, for Treasury savings certificates," said Postmaster Daisy Lynk. "The large amount of money invested, and the great number of persons who purchased war savings stamps, showed that the people of this country could save money when the necessity arose. Now, if they will take the money they saved when they bought stamps to aid the government in the prosecution of the war and buy Treasury savings certificates, they will demonstrate that the thrift lessons of the war have not been without effect. The holders of war savings stamps have seen investments of about $20.50 grow to $25.00 in five years, and larger amounts in the same proportion. They can see the same thing repeated if they reinvest in Treasury savings certificates. Interest accumulates at the rate 4 per cent each year, compounded semi-annually. These savings certificates are exempt from the normal Federal income tax, and from all State and local taxation (except estate and inheritance taxes), and may be held to the amount of $5,000, maturity value, for each issue, by every member of a family. They are backed by the credit of the United States Government, and afford an easy and sure method of saving."

J Train Hits Auto At Frankfort

Fred Block and sister, Mrs. Wisover, both of Frankfort, figured in a serious auto wreck, Friday night, when their auto was struck by an E. J. & E. train at the Baumgartner crossing, southwest of the village. They were coming toward Frankfort, and had to stop and wait for an east-bound freight train to pass. A work train, west bound, came down the opposite track unnoticed by either Mr. Block or his sister, as they drove the car onto the crossing, and struck the auto, which was completely wrecked. Mr. Block and his sister were thrown out of the car. Mrs. Wisover sustained a broken rib, cuts and bruises. Mr. Block suffered injury to his right arm and was also badly bruised. It is rumored the engineer of the train which struck the auto did not whistle for the crossing.

Pretty Home-Made Gifts

Among Home-Made Toys

Among the things that delight little folks are dolls and small animals made of elderdown flannel or Turkish toweling, and painted with water color paints. The doll and dressed-up kittle pictured here, are among them. The doll's face may be made of a piece of ribbed stocking and the kittle's face and clothes are painted on.

To Frame Fair Faces

Every Christmas brings new break-fast caps. Here are three of them made of net, lace and ribbon in different shapes and decked with tiny ribbon flowers. Each has a short, elastic tane set in a casing across the back, to fit it to the head, and they are among the welcome gifts that can be made by their donors.

Lovely Ribbon Gifts

Some one you know is hoping to find a new pair of garters or a rich ribbon bag in her Christmas stocking and here are garters and bags that are guaranteed to please. One pair of the garters is made of narrow silver ribbon finished with tiny ribbon roses. Satin ribbon and narrow black lace make the other pair. Black moire ribbon with silver filigree mounting and ring handles serve for the handsome bag lined with rose colored satin. The other bag uses black and silver brocade with a tortoise shell mounting.

Things That Men Like

Here is a decorative bag, of printed cotton challie 25 inches long and 17 inches wide. A scalloped edge turns up over a straight edge at the bottom and each scallop has a buttonhole, fastening over a glass button. The bag is supported by a coat hanger, faced at the top and bottom with plain challie and French knots made of heavy zephyr decorate it. Hung in the closet it makes a handy receptacle for soiled collars and handkerchiefs, which are thrust in at the top and fall out at the bottom when the bag is unbuttoned. Men like such conveniences.

Pretty Neckwear Sets

Every woman loves dainty neckwear and it is twice welcome when the donor herself has made it. There are many pretty sets this year made of white or colored organdie and other sheer fabrics. A collar, vestee and cuff set is shown here of white organdie cross-barred with black. Little flowers in red, green and purple floss are embroidered on the pieces in lazy-daisy stitch. For girls Peter Pan collars and cuffs to match are made of checked tissue gingham, edged with ready-made, scalloped trimming of plaited organdie, or other edging.

Cardboard Doll Cradle

Little girls get much joy out of dolls' furniture. A Dutch cradle and the pieces that make it are shown here, in heavy cardboard. The tabs on the side pieces (Fig. 2) are perforated and slip through slots in the bottom piece (Fig. 1) and through the head and foot boards (Fig. 3). Little wood pegs, thrust through the perforations, hold the pieces together. Fig. 1 is 8 1/2 inches long and 4 inches wide. Fig. 2 is 9 1/2 inches wide at top, 8 1/2 inches at bottom, 2 1/2 inches wide at head, 2 1/2 inches at foot. Fig. 3 is 5 1/2 inches high and 5 1/2 inches wide. The rocker measures 6 1/2 inches across. The cradle may be finished with painted decorations.

A Graceful Lantern

No decoration will be more effective in dressing up the house at Christmas time than lanterns and candle shades of crepe paper and tinsel. A graceful lantern is illustrated here, made on a wire frame over which the paper covering is pasted and cut-out figures are pasted to the sides. The long tassel may be of tinsel or crepe paper. Festoons of flower petals, strung on cords, finish this pretty decoration.

Rich Table Scarfs

Very handsome scarfs for the library table are made of black velvet with an applique of wide brocaded ribbon down the center. They are a little shorter than the table and have fish-tail ends with a silk tassel pendant from each point.

LESSON FOR DECEMBER 3

JESUS SENDING OUT MISSIONARIES

LESSON TEXT—Luke 10:1-24.
GOLDEN TEXT—The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that He would send forth laborers into the harvest.—Luke 10:2.
REFERENCE MATERIAL—Matthew 10:1-42.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Sends Out Seventy Helpers.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Sends Forth Seventy Missionaries.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Heralds of the Kingdom.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Our Home Mission Work.

I. The Seventy Sent Forth (vv. 1, 2).
1. Appointed by the Lord (v. 1). Only those should go forth who are appointed by the Lord.

2. Sent Forth Two by Two (v. 1). The purpose of this was that they might mutually help, counsel and support each other.

3. Reason for Their Appointment (v. 2). The harvest was great, but the laborers were few. The task before the Christian church after nearly 1900 years is still great.

4. Pray the Lord to Send Forth Laborers (v. 2). The realization of the prodigious task before us will cause us to pray to the Lord to send forth more laborers.

II. Instructions Given (vv. 3-16).

1. He Reveals the Dangers Confronting Them (v. 3). They were thrust forth by the Lord to proclaim His name, though so doing would expose them to deadly peril, even as lambs surrounded by hungry wolves. It matters not what the dangers are if the Lord sends forth.

2. Free From All Incumbrance (v. 4). The mission was urgent, so all that would in any way hinder the speedy execution of the task was to be left behind.

3. Distraction of Social Intercourse to Be Omitted (v. 4). Eastern salutations were long-drawn affairs. To go into such formalities would delay Christ's messengers.

4. Behavior in the Homes Where Received (vv. 5-9). (1) Offer the peace of the gospel (vv. 5, 6). This is to be done regardless as to whether it will be received or not. There is a reflex blessedness in preaching the gospel. Even when the message is rejected the effort is not wasted, but comes back to the one who has made the effort. (2) Do not shift quarters (vv. 7, 8). Missionaries should remain in the home where they have been received, content with what is given them. They should not demand better food and more comfortable quarters than what is commonly provided. However, that which is given should be gratefully received, for the laborer is worthy of his hire. (3) Healed the sick (v. 9). These disciples were given power to heal the sick. The ministers of Christ should seek to give relief to those in distress and use every opportunity to proclaim the gospel message.

5. The Awful Fate of Those Who Reject Christ's Message (vv. 10-16). Their case is more hopeless than that of Sodom. Those who reject Christ's messengers reject Christ.

III. The Return of the Seventy (vv. 17-24).

1. Their Report (v. 17). They were highly elated. They seemed to be agreeably surprised. They not only found that they could heal the sick, but cast out demons also. They seemed to be filled with self-satisfaction. It is easy even in Christian service to be spoiled by our successes.

2. Jesus' Answer (vv. 18-24). (1) He told them it was no surprise to Him (vv. 18, 19). With prophetic eye He saw their success as indicating that time when the prince of this world would be overthrown (John 12:31). By virtue of His mighty triumph over Satan He assures them that they need have no fear of what should befall them. Nothing could harm them; nothing could prosper which opposed them. Indeed, nothing can harm the servant who goes about His Master's business. (2) Real cause for rejoicing (v. 20). He promptly rebuked them, telling them that their chief joy should be because of their heavenly relation, not because of these miraculous gifts. That above all which should provoke gratitude is the fact that God has chosen in Christ and saved us, inscribing our names in heaven. (3) Jesus' exultation (vv. 21, 22). The consciousness that soon the victory would be won because God had committed all things unto Him, and that only as men received Him could they know the Father, caused Him to rejoice in what was being accomplished. (4) Congratulates the disciples. (vv. 23, 24).

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER
Copyright by Western Newspaper Union

A TRUE CHRISTMAS STORY

"Once a year," said Daddy, "it is nice to have a Christmas talk."

"Indeed it is," said Nancy.
And Nick said: "Sure it is!"

"The title of these stories of ours," said Daddy, "is, as we all know, 'Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale.'"

"I think it makes a nice title for our little nightly story. It sounds cozy and pleasant and as though it might be a story of almost anything."

"Much Too Sad."

Sometimes it is of animals and sometimes of birds and sometimes of fairies and sometimes of gnomes and now and again of Witty Witch or Old Mr. Giant, and quite often, too, it is of Billie Brownie.

"We know that our Christmas stories aren't fairy stories nor of Fairyland people but that they are true stories of Santa Claus and his world, and tonight I want to tell the story of the Great Noise. First, though, I want to hear of all the things Nick and Nancy have been asking as Christmas gifts."

"Well," said Nick, "last year I saw a beautiful train. It went by electricity and was attached to an electric light connection."

"The train has several cars as well as its engine and it had a beautiful tunnel."

"It ran around and around the track and when it went up-grade or where the floor sloped upward a little it went more slowly."

"It got up more speed and went faster when the slope was downward."

"It had three different headlights which could be changed. One was red and one green and one was white, and all the rest of the lights in the room were turned out so these could be seen."

"And it looked great to see the light in front of the train going around on the tracks in the dark."

"And it lighted up the tunnel and made most wonderful shadows. Then there were signals, too."

"But that's almost more of a present than I would hope for as 'most any kind of a train would be all right.'"

"Well," said Nancy, "I want a whole lot of popcorn. I haven't had enough for ever so long. I mean really enough."

"And last year, I remember, Santa left me such wonderful popcorn and he wrote on a little piece of paper that it had come right out of the popcorn bag in his pack."

"And I want a set of paper dolls. And I think I would very much like to have a dolls' kitchen and a dolls' set of dishes."

"But, Daddy, we are doing all the talking and we want to hear a little story anyway."

"We do, indeed," said Nick. "Somehow we get talking around Christmas time and we don't get to our story."

"But do begin, Daddy," urged Nancy.

"Well," said Daddy, "I shall tell you the story of the Great Noise."

"Yes, that was what you promised us," said Nancy.

"When I was a little boy," said Daddy, "we lived in the country and the town nearest our home was not nearly so big a town as even little towns are now, for it was harder to reach; and travel was not so easy in those days."

"I became terribly afraid as Christmas drew near that Santa would not come to our house. The snow had drifted and the air was so cold and it just seemed so far away that I felt Santa couldn't manage it."

"I didn't tell a soul of what I feared, but oh dear, how I did feel! I knew Santa was used to cold weather, but to come to our house almost did seem too much."

"I couldn't go to sleep Christmas eve at first. I was feeling much too sad. It had snowed more and more. I was just certain Santa would feel he would have to give our house up. I was the only little boy in it at that time and it was too much of a trip to make for one little boy on such a night. It might delay Santa so he couldn't take in all the houses with more boys and girls."

"Finally I was almost falling asleep when I heard a great noise. I kept very still and in keeping so still I suppose I dropped off to sleep. But the next morning I found Santa Claus had been to see me in spite of the storm; and the Great Noise had been Santa arriving, the faithful, splendid Santa!"

"Such Wonderful Popcorn."

Important to All Women Readers of This Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney trouble and suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and maybe despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine, will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by parcel post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

Farmer's Wife Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Well Woman

Carter's Creek, Tenn.—"Three years ago I was almost an invalid. I spent half of my time in bed, being afflicted with a trouble which women of a certain age are apt to have. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I am a well woman now and have been for two years. I can work as well as any one who is younger and as I am a farmer's wife I have plenty to do for I cultivate my own garden, raise many chickens and do my own housework. A TRUE RAT STORY

Auburntown, Tenn., 6-22-22.
Dear Sirs: Mr. Robert J. Donnell of Auburntown, Tenn., came in our store the other day and wanted something to kill rats, so I sold him a box Stearns' Electric Paste. And he put some paste on the second night he put out four more biscuits with paste on them, and the second morning he found seventeen more rats, making a total of seventy-one rats in two nights, and there were lots more that he did not find.

This is some big rat tale, but, nevertheless, it is so. Just thought would write to let you know that your rat paste is good.

Respectfully, KENNEDY BROTHERS.

Gold in Madagascar.

Gold discoveries in Madagascar are arousing interest, as several rich finds have been reported. On the eastern slope of the island are districts said to be very rich. Nuggets and dust are found in stream beds, but the principal lode has not yet been discovered. The methods of recovering the gold have been very crude, and only native workmen have so far proved capable of withstanding the climate.

CHAPTER IX—Continued.

And while I read the letter, I just knew he would do it. Why, I could even see the sparkle of the ring on my finger. But in five minutes after the letter was folded and put away, I knew, with equal certitude—that he wouldn't.

I had been at home exactly eight hours when a telegram from Jerry asked permission to come at once.

As gently as I could I broke the news to Father and Mother. He was Helen's brother. They must have heard me mention him. I knew him well, very well, indeed. In fact, the purpose of this visit was to ask them for the hand of their daughter.

Father frowned and scolded, and said, "Tut, tut!" and that I was nothing but a child. But Mother smiled and shook her head, even while she sighed, and reminded him that I was twenty-two whole years older than she was when she married him; though in the same breath she admitted that I was young, and she certainly hoped I'd be willing to wait before I married, even if the young man was all that they could ask him to be.

Father was still a little rebellious, I think, but Mother—bless her dear sympathetic heart!—soon convinced him that they must at least consent to see this Gerald Weston. So I sent the wire inviting him to come.

Jerry came—and he had not been five minutes in the house before it might easily have seemed that he had always been there. He did know about stars; at least, he talked with Father about them, and so as to hold Father's interest, too. And he knew a lot about innumerable things in which Mother was interested. He stayed four days; and all the while he was there, I never so much as thought of ceremonious dress and dinners, and liveried butlers and footmen; nor did it once occur to me that our simple kitchen Nora, and Old John's son at the wheel of our one motorcar, were not beautifully and entirely adequate, so unassumingly and so perfectly did Jerry unmistakably "fit in." (There are no other words that so exactly express what I mean.) And in the end, even his charm and his triumph were so unobtrusively complete that I never thought of being surprised at the prompt capitulation of both Father and Mother.

Jerry had brought the ring. (Jerry always brings his "rings"—and he never fails to "put them on.") And he went back to New York with Mother's promise that I should visit them in July at their cottage in Newport.

They seemed like a dream—those four days—after he had gone; and I should have been tempted to doubt the whole thing had there not been the sparkle of the ring on my finger, and the frequent reference to Jerry on the lips of both Father and Mother.

They loved Jerry, both of them. Father said, he was a fine, manly young fellow; and Mother said he was a dear boy, a very dear boy. Neither of them spoke much of his painting. Jerry himself had scarcely mentioned it to them, as I remember, after he had gone.

I went to Newport in July. "The cottage," as I suspected, was twice as large and twice as pretentious as the New York residence; and it sported twice the number of servants. Once again I was caught in the whirl of dinners and dances and motoring, with the addition of tennis and bathing. And always, at my side, was Jerry, seemingly living only upon my lightest whim and fancy. He wished to paint my portrait; but there was no time, especially as my visit, in accordance with Mother's inexorable decision, was of only one week's duration.

But what a wonderful week that was! I seemed to be under a kind of spell. It was as if I were in a new world—a world such as no one had ever been in before. Oh, I knew, of course, that others had loved—but not as we loved. I was sure that no one had ever loved as we loved. And it was so much more wonderful than anything I had ever dreamed of—this love of ours. Yet all my life since my early teens I had been thinking and planning and waiting for it—love. And now it had come—the real thing. The others—all the others had been shams and make-believes and counterfeits.

At Newport Jerry decided that he wanted to be married right away. He didn't want to wait two more endless years until I was graduated. The idea of wasting all that valuable time when we might be together! And when there was really no reason for it, either—no reason at all!

I smiled to myself, even as I thrilled at his sweet insistence. I was pretty sure I knew two reasons—two very good reasons—why I could not marry before graduation. One reason was Father; the other reason was Mother. I hinted as much.

"Ho! Is that all?" He laughed and kissed me. "I'll run down and see them about it," he said jauntily.

I smiled again. I had no more idea that anything he could say would—

But I didn't know Jerry—then.

I had not been home from Newport a week when Jerry kept his promise and "ran down." And he had not been there two days before Father and Mother admitted that, perhaps, after all, it would not be so bad an idea if I shouldn't graduate, but should be married instead.

And so I was married.

(Didn't I tell you that Jerry always brought rings and put them on?)

And again I say, and so we were married.

But what did we know of each other?—the real other? True, we had danced together, been swimming together, dined together, played tennis together. But what did we really know of each other's whims and prejudices, opinions and personal habits and tastes? I knew, to a word, what Jerry would say about a sunset; and he knew, I fancy, what I would say about a dreamy waltz song. But we didn't either of us know what the other would say to a dinnerless home with the cook gone. We were leaving a good deal to be learned later on; but we didn't think of that. Love that is to last must be built upon the realization that troubles and trials and sorrows are sure to come, and that they must be borne together—if one back is not to break under the load. We were entering into a contract, not for a week, but, presumably, for a lifetime—and a good deal may come to one in a lifetime—not all of it pleasant. We had been brought up in two distinctly different social environments, but we didn't stop to think of that. We liked the same sunsets, and the same make of car, and the same kind of ice-cream; and we looked into each other's eyes and thought we knew each other—whereas we were really only seeing the mirrored reflection of ourselves.

And so we were married.

It was everything that was blissful and delightful, of course, at first. We were still eating the ice-cream and admiring the sunsets. I had forgotten that there were things other than sunset and ice-cream, I suspect. I was not twenty-one, remember, and my feet fairly ached to dance. The whole world was a show. Music, lights, laughter—how I loved them all!

Then came the baby, Eunice, my little girl; and with one touch of her tiny, clinging fingers, the whole world of sham—the lights and music and glare and glitter just faded all away into nothingness, where it belonged. As if anything counted, with her on the other side of the scales!

I found out then—oh, I found out lots of things. You see, it wasn't that way at all with Jerry. The lights and music and the glitter and the sham didn't fade away a mite, to him, when Eunice came. In fact, sometimes it seemed to me they just grew stronger, if anything.

He didn't like it because I couldn't go with him any more—to dances and things, I mean. He said the nurse could take care of Eunice. As if I'd leave my baby with any nurse that ever lived, for any old dance! The idea! But Jerry went. At first he stayed with me; but the baby cried, and Jerry didn't like that. It made him irritable and nervous, until I was glad to have him go.

I think it was about this time that Jerry took up his painting again. I guess I have forgotten to mention that all through the first two years of our marriage, before the baby came, he just tended to me. He never painted a single picture. But after Eunice came—

But, after all, what is the use of going over these last miserable years like this? Eunice is five now. Her father is the most popular portrait painter in the country. I am almost tempted to say that he is the most popular man, as well. All the old charm and magnetism are there. Sometimes I watch him (for, of course, I do go out with him once in a while), and always I think of that first day I saw him at college. Brilliant, polished, witty—he still dominates every group of which he is a member. Men and women alike bow to his charm.

After all, I suspect that it's just that Jerry still loves the ice-cream and sunsets, and I don't. That's all. To me there's something more to life than that—something higher, deeper, more worth while. We haven't a taste in common, a thought in unison, an aspiration in harmony. I suspect—in fact I know—that I get on his nerves just as raspingly as he does on mine. For that reason I'm sure he'll be glad—when he gets my letter.

But, some way, I dread to tell Mother.

Well, it's finished. I've been about four days bringing this autobiography of Mary Marie's to an end. I've enjoyed doing it, in a way, though I'll have to admit I can't see as it's made things any clearer. But, then, it was clear before. There isn't any other way. I've got to write that letter. As I said before, I regret that it must be so sorry an ending.

I suppose tomorrow I'll have to tell Mother. I want to tell her, of course, before I write the letter to Jerry.

It'll grieve Mother. I know it will. And I'm sorry. Poor Mother! Already she's had so much unhappiness in her life. But she's happy now. She and Father are wonderful together—wonderful. Father is still president of the college. He got out a wonderful book on the "Eclipses of the Moon" two years ago, and he's publishing another one about the "Eclipses of the Sun" this year. Mother's correcting proof for him. Bless her heart. She loves it. She told me so.

Well, I shall have to tell her tomorrow, of course.

TOMORROW—WHICH HAS BE-

COME TODAY.

I wonder if Mother knew what I had come into her little sitting-room this morning to say. It seems as if she must have known. And yet—

I had wondered how I was going to begin, but, before I knew it, I was right in the middle of it—the subject, I mean. That's why I thought perhaps that Mother—

But I'm getting as bad as little Mary Marie of the long ago. I'll try now to tell what did happen.

I was wetting my lips, and swallowing, and wondering how I was going to begin to tell her that I was planning not to go back to Jerry, when all of a sudden I found myself saying something about little Eunice. And then Mother said:

"Yes, my dear; and that's what comforts me most of anything—because you are so devoted to Eunice. You see, I have feared sometimes—for you and Jerry; that you might separate. But I know, on account of Eunice, that you never will."

"But, Mother, that's the very reason—I mean, it would be the reason," I stammered. Then I stopped. My tongue just wouldn't move, my throat and lips were so dry.

But Mother was speaking again.

"Eunice—yes. You mean that you never would make her go through what you went through when you were her age."

"Why, Mother, I—I—" And then I stopped again. And I was so angry and indignant with myself because I had to stop, when there were so many, many things that I wanted to say, if only my dry lips could articulate the words.

Mother drew her breath in with a little catch. She had grown rather white.

"I wonder if you remember—if you ever think of—your childhood," she said.

"Why, yes, of—of course—sometimes." It was my turn to stammer. I was thinking of that diary that I had just read—and added to.

Mother drew in her breath again, this time with a catch that was almost a sob. And then she began to talk—at first haltingly, with half-finished sentences; then hurriedly, with a rush of words that seemed not able to utter themselves fast enough to keep up with the thoughts behind them.

She told of her youth and marriage, and of my coming. She told of her life with Father, and of the mistakes she made. She told much, of course, that was in Mary Marie's diary; but she told, oh, so much more, until I felt a panorama the whole thing lay before me.

Movements of the Tides.

The spring tides, or tides having the greatest range, occur near the times of new moon and full moon. The neap tides, or tides having the lowest range, occur near the times of first and last quarters of the moon. The highest of the spring tides is from one to two days after new or full moon. At this time, also, the low waters will be lower than usual.

EXTENDING TIME OF THANKS

Each Day Might Be Made a Season for Expressing Gratitude for Manifest Blessings.

It is human nature to pay more heed to things which discomfort us than to those which contribute to our happiness. The latter we accept as a matter of course and do not regard very attentively until, perchance, we are deprived of them, when we promptly number them among our regrets and repine over them frequently.

If we were to devote five minutes a day to recalling the things for which we, as individuals or as citizens, have reason to be thankful, we should find ourselves much happier and the world would be much easier to get along with. In time, perhaps, we should find our thankful periods extending themselves and our periods of worry and discontent growing correspondingly shorter.

This being the Thanksgiving time, officially designated for a review of our blessings, it might be a good time to inaugurate a plan for being thankful for at least a few minutes every day. One does not require to be a Pollyanna to accomplish this.

Almost Ready for Oven

Here is the pride of the barnyard, well on the way toward the final stage of his career.

Hymn

For Summer's bloom and Autumn's blight,
For bending wheat and blasted maize,
For health and sickness, Lord of light,
And Lord of darkness, hear our praise!

We trace to Thee our joys and woes—
To Thee, of causes still the cause—
We thank Thee that Thy hand bestows;
We bless Thee that Thy love withdraws.

We bring no sorrows to Thy throne;
We come to Thee with no complaint;
In Providence Thy will is done,
And that is sacred to the saint.

Here, on this blest Thanksgiving Night,
We raise to Thee our grateful voice;
For what Thou doest, Lord, is right;
And, thus believing, we rejoice.

From "Bitter-Sweet," by J. G. Holland.

The Spirit of Thanksgiving

As we read of old time Thanksgiving customs, we realize that the world has been traveling fast since then—away from the simple and the spiritual.

One of the customs, particularly, was quaint.

After the Thanksgiving dinner, while the family was still seated around the table, each member was asked to tell for what, in the past year, he was particularly thankful.

These recitals were always revelations of character. The small children of the family mentioned some material thing, a sled or a doll, for which they were grateful.

The older children, those in their teens, were more abstract. They were thankful for the advantages of education, of family prestige, or their social position—a bit self-centered, perhaps, as is wont with youth in its teens.

But mother and father, in their maturity of years, knew that the greatest blessings of life were health and happiness, and their recitals of thankfulness always included a word of thanksgiving that the family had been spared illness and poverty. No thought for the future of son's success in school, and daughter's improvement in controlling her temper.

The spirit of the day calls for just such a touch of spiritual introspection. It keeps alive that family spirit, the joy of an assembled family, the particular source of Thanksgiving to each member, along with the joy of the old-fashioned dinner.

Old-Time Thanksgiving.

A quaint account of a Thanksgiving dinner back in 1779, is given in a letter of one Juliana Smith, written to her dear "Dear Cousin Betsey," found in an old diary:

"This year it was Uncle Simeon's turn to have the dinner at his house, but of course we all helped them as they help us when it is our turn, and there is always enough for us all to do. All the baking of pies and cakes was done at our house, and we had the big oven heated and filled twice each day for three days before it was all done, and everything was good, though we did have to do without some things that ought to be used. Neither Love nor Money could buy Raisins, but our good red cherries dried without the pitse, did almost as well, and happily Uncle Simeon still had some splees in store. The tables were set in the Dining Hall, and even that big room had no space to spare when we were all seated. The Servants had enough ado to get around the Tables and serve us all without oversetting things. There were our two Grandmothers, side by side. They are always handsome old ladies, but now, many thought, they were handsomer than ever, and happy they were to look upon so many of their descendants.

The Crown of the Feast.

"There was no Plum Pudding, but a boiled Suet Pudding, stirred thick with dried Plums and Cherries, was called by the old Name and answered the purpose. All the other splees had been used in the Mince Pie, so for this Pudding we used a jar of West India preserved Ginger, which chanced to be left of the last shipment which Uncle Simeon had from there. We chopped the Ginger small and stirred it through with the Plums and Cherries. It was extraordinary good. The day was bitter cold and when we got home from Meeting, which father did not keep over long by reason of the cold, we were glad of the fire in Uncle's Dining Hall, but by the time the dinner was one-half over, those of us who were on the fire side of one table were forced to get up and carry our plates around to the far side of the other table, while those who had sat there were glad to bring their plates around to the fire side to get warm. All but the Old Ladies, who had a screen put behind their chairs."

Thanksgiving

Oh, the farm was bright, Thanksgiving morn,
With its stacks of hay and shocks of corn,
Its pumpkin heaps in the rambling shed,
And its apples brown and green and red;
And in the cellar, the winter store,
In bins that were filled and running o'er
With all the things that a farm could keep.
In barrel and bin and goodly heap,
Hung to the rafters and hid away—
Oh, the farm was a pleasant place to stay!

And here and there was the Jersey stock,
The sheep and horses—Old Prince and Jock—
The turkeys and geese and awkward calf,
And the goat that made the children laugh.
A pair of mules that a friend had sent
Out to the farm for experiment,
Pigeons and fowls and a guinea pig,
Dogs that were small and dogs that were big,
Chickens that were white and black and gray—
Oh, the farm was a jolly sight that day!

Out back of the house the orchard stood,
Then came the brook and the chestnut wood,
The old sawmill where the children play,
The fodder barn with its piles of hay,
The walnut grove and the cranberry bog,
The wood back hole and the barking dog,
The wintergreen and the robber's cave—
Wherein who entered was counted brave—
The skating pond with its fringe of bay—
Oh, the farm was a right good place to stay!

The big home barn was a place of joy
For the romping girl and the climbing boy,
With beams and mows and ladders to mount,
Horses and oxen and sheep to count,
Funting of nests of shy old hens afoot,
Tumbling hay and fashioning dens,
Helping the men to do up the chores,
Shutting windows and locking doors,
Letting some work come in with the play—
Oh, the farm was a jolly place to stay!

Oh, the pantry shelves were loaded down
With cakes that were plump and rich and brown,
With apple pie and pumpkin and mince,
And jellies and jam and preserved quince,
Vegetables, breads, and beehives sweet,
A great brown turkey and plates of meat,
Sauces fixed in the daintiest way—
Oh, 'twas a glorious sight that day!

Oh, the farm was bright Thanksgiving morn,
The sun shone clear on the hay and corn,
The guests came early with laugh and shout,
And the boys and girls scattered about,
Seeking the pets they had known before,
Climbing through window instead of door,
Racing from barn to corncrib or mill,
Shouting and laughing with glee, until
The dinner-horn sounded. Oh, I say
'Twas pleasant upon the farm that day!

MEXICO ITS HOME

Domestic Species of Turkey Had Origin There.

Thanksgiving Bird, So Well and Favorably Known Today, Never of the Wild Species.

At this time of the year when the feasting holidays are here, almost everyone thinks of turkey, which also took an important part in the first Thanksgiving of the Puritans, the founders of Thanksgiving as we know it today. Little is known of the early history of the domestic turkey. Writers of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries seem to have been ignorant about it, and to have regarded it as the guineafowl or pintado of the ancients, a mistake which was not cleared up until the middle of the last century, says a writer in the New York Sun.

The name it now bears, and which it received in England where it is reputed to have been introduced in 1541, was given it from the supposition that it came originally from Turkey. As far back as 1573 we read of it as having been the Christmas fare of the sturdy British yeomanry.

Came From Mexican Fowl. Audubon, one of the early pioneers of American ornithology, supposed our common barnyard turkey to have originated in the wild bird so prevalent in the eastern half of the United States. But it has always been a matter of surprise to naturalists that the latter did not assimilate, by interbreeding and reversion, more intimately in color and habits to the domestic form. No suspicion, until recently, appears to have been entertained that the two birds might belong to different species.

Our common wild turkey, once so plentiful in Pennsylvania and New York, is now restricted to the more eastern and southern portions of the Perfect Specimens.

United States, while in the parts of Texas, New Mexico, Colorado and Arizona, thence stretching southward along the eastern slope of Mexico, there exists another form, essentially different, which by way of distinction, has been popularly called the Mexican turkey. It is from this species, and not from the other, as has been erroneously supposed, that the domestic fowl has been derived.

Many Differences Seen.

Between the wild bird of eastern North America and the Mexican and typical barnyard fowls there are differences which must be apparent to the most superficial observer. The extremities of the tail feathers as well as the feathers overlying the base of the tail are in the latter creamy or fulvous white, while in the former they are of a decided chestnut brown color. Other characteristics exist, apparent to the ornithologist.

The difficulty experienced in establishing a cross between our wild and tame birds, shows that they are not as closely related as one would suppose. Did a near kinship exist, interbreeding would more easily be accomplished. With the Mexican turkey, matters are otherwise. That a relationship does exist between the domestic bird and the latter there can be no question, as specimens of the naturalized species are often met with which are nearly the counterpart of its Mexican progenitor, differing only in the greater development of the fatty appendages of the head and neck, differences which may be accounted for as the effects of the influences to which the birds have been subjected by man. No well-authenticated instance of similar reversions to our once familiar eastern bird have been known to occur, which would necessarily have been the case had they been so closely related as was once maintained.

America's Own Day.

Thanksgiving is particularly our own holiday. It originated here and no other continent than this has it. Except for the Thanksgiving days of the United States and Canada there is in all the earth no official occasion for returning thanks to Providence by the people as a people irrespective of sect. Christmas and New Year's are celebrated wherever the cross has found its way; independence and memorial days are observed in many lands; but the only national Thanksgiving day is ours.

THE BLESSED

By Nancy Byrd Turner

November darkens to its close,
They kneel beside their flickering hearth:
Without, one little wistful rose
Is drooping toward the barren earth.
A frost has whitened the April fruit,
A blight has seared the summer corn,
Sharp hail had smitten to the root
The golden barley, overborne.

"But oh," he cries, "I love you, sweet!
What shall we seek of wind or weather
So long as we can surely meet
The sunshine and the storm together?"

Her meager little garden prayed
All long July for quenching rain;
The sad-eyed cattle left the shade
To seek their cooling creek in vain;
The flowers that her hands had cherished,
That made the borders beauty-bright,
They bowed their lovely heads and perished;

Her tears had fallen at the sight.
"But ah," she breathes, "I love you,
dear!
It cannot truly matter whether
We gain the year or lose the year,
Just so we live the year together."

Then on the hearth a fagot falls
And breaks to sudden leaping light;
A cricket in a corner calls:
Slow silence deepens down the night.
The circle of his young arm makes
A shelter where the dark had been;
The old clock on the mantel wakes
And cries Thanksgiving in.

Awful Possibility

If Thanksgiving Dinner Was Reversed, How Would You Like It?

REASONS FOR GIVING THANKS

As a Nation, the American People Has Ample Cause for Rejoicing at This Period.

It is three hundred years since Thanksgiving day was first celebrated in the American continent. The Pilgrims to your gaze has been a long time,
But the rarest, fairest picture of first winter at Plymouth, and though they were beset by hardships and by the fear of their savage neighbors, found in the survival of the little colony and in the hope of a gradually ameliorating lot just cause for thanksgiving to God.
Have we, who have inherited the institutions and the spiritual ideals that they labored to establish, less reason than they to be thankful?

Like the other nations of the world the United States has reached a great social and political crisis. We have passed through a great war, and we begin to feel the burden of debt and disaster that the war laid upon mankind. Our trade is disarranged; neither financially nor economically are we so prosperous as we are wont to be. We are a little afraid of the future, for we have been shaken out of the easy and comfortable confidence in our own efficiency in which we have been used to live.

But great material prosperity is not always a matter for thanksgiving. It sometimes softens and dissipates the strength and virtue of a nation. Perhaps nations like men should echo the prayer of Agur: "Give me neither poverty nor riches." We have enough and, like the Pilgrims, we can reasonably hope for an increasing store of comforts in the coming years. Is there not ample cause for thanksgiving in the fact that, although the nation has been tried by adversity and loss and assailed by doubt and misgivings, it shows no sign of losing its heart or its head? The gospel of hard work and cheerful courage still counts most Americans as its adherents. We are working our way out of the depression that the war caused.

We do not thank God because our way is the way of fairness and of peace, but because, in the time of testing and trial, our people are able to quit themselves like men.—Youth's Companion.

ORLAND

Miss Lillian Kollman, popular and one of Orland's pretty young girls, became the bride of Mr.
Fred Jaffke, Chicago, November
25th, at the Orland Christ Lutheran church.

The wedding occurred at 3:15 o'clock. The bridal party marched up the aisle to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by Mrs. Charles Khoebler.
The bride was attired in a beautiful gown of canton crepe and georgette; she also wore a corsage of bridal roses and lillies of the valley.

The following were the bridesmaids: Miss Louise Khoebler, dressed in a gown of pale blue
canton crepe and shadow lace; Miss Elfreida Sidvert, dressed in a gown of green satin crepe and shadow lace; and Miss Clara Grueke, maid of honor, dressed in a pretty gown of pink crepe de chine. The best men were: Mr.
Ernest Jaffke, Mr. Albert Claus-sing and Martin Kollman, brother of the bride.

After the ceremony, the bridal party and a host of relatives and friends adjourned to the home of the bride's parents, where a very elaborate and delicious five-course supper was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jaffke received many beautiful and useful gifts. Their many friends and relatives extended them their heartiest congratulations.

Mrs. John Gee and daughter Eather entertained the following at a duck dinner Sunday: Mr.
and Mrs. William Hewson and daughter Laurie, Miss Viola Beagle, Mr. Ernest Evans, choirmaster, Mr. Alfred Klein and Mr.
Lemont Blackburn.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Cooper entertained the following at a chicken dinner Sunday: Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Cooper and children, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Strand and son Donald, Mr. and Mrs. Emi
Kench, George Kench, Miss Julia
Yunker and Mr. Arthur Beagle.

Quite a number from Orland attended the dedication of the Masonic Temple, Blue Island.

Mr. Edward Gee underwent an operation at a Chicago hospital.

Messrs. Thomas and Charles Cooper had four horses killed by a freight train, near William Roberts.

The Ladies' Guild met at the home of Mrs. David Agate. A comforter was tied. After the meeting, a potluck dinner was served.

The Orland Park Club are going to render a play Friday evening, at Woodman hall.

Mr. Alfred Klein has returned from his hunting trip to Beard-town, Ill.

Mr. Clarence Beagle took rural carrier's examination Saturday,
Nov. 25th, in Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Cox
Mrs. Thomas Wheeler and daughter Marian motored to Valparaiso, Ind., Tuesday, and spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Wheeler.

A number of Masons from Orland attended the banquet given by Masons of Blue Island in the Masonic Temple, Wednesday evening.

The Bunco party given Wednesday evening by the Royal Neighbors was well attended. Twenty games were played. Those awarded prizes were: George Cox, first; Herman Nicoli, booby.
Ladies—Mrs. Herman Nicoli, first;
Miss Burnadette Bremmer, booby.
A lunch of sandwiches, pickles, cake and coffee was served by the ladies of the Camp.

Messrs. Thomas and Charles
Cooper, who reside south of town, had the misfortune of having three horses killed and one severely injured by a north-bound Wabash freight train, early Friday morning. They being all young horses, were in pasture, and somehow broke the fence and made their way on the track. It was necessary to call the section men to clear the track before transportation could go on.

Mr. John A. Klein returned home Tuesday morning from a hunting trip along the Mississippi river. He brought home twenty-one ducks.

Mr. Carl Quigley and Mr. Raymond J. J. returned home on Thursday night from Shelbyville with five quail.

Kisses by Mail Convict.

Sending kisses by mail is held by a divorce court in Los Angeles to be as definite evidence of disloyalty to one's wife as delivery of the same by lip contact. Mrs. Joseph A. Green charged this offense against her husband, and produced letters to show that the other woman in the case sent kisses in return to Green. Separate maintenance and alimony was the decree of the court.

Case of Arrested Development.

When a woman was summoned at Folkestone, Eng., for neglecting her child, a police inspector said the girl, although eleven, behaved as if she were seven. The woman told him the girl, who had not been out for a year, was entirely fed on malted milk, eggs, and fresh milk from a bottle, as she could not feed herself.

BREAKDOWN OF DRY LAW SEEN

President and Cabinet Talk of Prohibition Enforcement Failure.

REMEDIES ARE DISCUSSED

Harding Sees Peril in Violations of the Volstead Act—Public May Be Appealed to for Support of Law.

Washington, Nov. 25.—Complete breakdown in liquor law enforcement, bringing with it a contempt for all law and, graver still, a lack of full measured respect for American institutions, is giving President Harding and other administration leaders grave concern. The entire time of the cabinet session Friday was given to consideration of the failure to make the country measurably dry.

The cabinet concluded that the people were to be held accountable for the failure rather than the law. An official statement made after the cabinet meeting as to the situation throughout the country as far as prohibition is concerned created a mild sensation in Washington because it was so in contrast with official announcements made over a long period of months by Prohibition Commissioner Haynes, which in every instance proclaimed a growing respect for the law and an increase in sentiment for law enforcement.

The concern of the President and his advisers is primarily with the menace to the country seen in the disregard for the prohibition law by otherwise law-abiding citizens.

The cabinet discussed ways and means of strengthening law enforcement and regard for the prohibition laws and the eighteenth amendment. The conclusion was that some form of appeal to the people was necessary. A means is being sought to get the support and help of the conscience-driven, government-loving members of the community that they will not permit or countenance violation of the liquor laws any more than other laws.

Reported Klan Invaded Capitol at Washington in Full Regalia—Congressman Demands Probe.

Washington, Nov. 25.—Congressional investigation of published reports that the Ku Klux Klan had invaded the United States capitol in full regalia, and that the same group had been in full regalia at the capitol in full regalia, was started by Representative John W. Rainey, Illinois.

He introduced a joint resolution providing for an investigating committee of three senators and four members of the house. The committee would inquire also into assertions that the state, war and navy and other government buildings have been made use of for Klan ceremonies.

COAL DISTRIBUTION STAYS

Federal Control Must Continue Until January 1, the President Tells Director C. S. Spens.

Washington, Nov. 25.—Federal control of coal distribution must be continued until January 1, President Harding decided. C. S. Spens, federal fuel distributor, called on the President to resign his office, but after discussing the situation agreed to remain in service until that date and to continue in effect the present supervision or a modification of it until the first of the year.

FORMER PASTOR HANGS MAN

Iowa Preacher-Sheriff Springs the Trap on Second Murderer Since Taking Office.

Fort Madison, Ia., Nov. 25.—Sheriff W. E. Robb, former pastor, performed his second legal execution, springing the trap hanging Orrie Cross, convicted slayer of George Fosdick, a Des Moines grocer. Eugene Weeks, who was implicated in the murder of Fosdick, was hanged by the former pastor September 15.

WILL RETIRE GOV. HARDING

President Decides Not to Reappoint Head of the Federal Reserve Board.

Washington, Nov. 25.—Following the filing of formal protests by members of the senate farm bloc against the reappointment of W. P. G. Harding as governor of the Federal Reserve board, President Harding has assured members of the bloc that he will defer to their wishes and will not reappoint Mr. Harding.

Caliph Takes Throne.

Constantinople, Nov. 25.—Prince Abdul Medjid Effendi became supreme caliph of the Moslems Friday. In the famous Topkapu palace he was invested with the sacred mantle of the prophet Mohammed.

Ward Bakery Fortune to Daughters.

White Plains, N. Y., Nov. 25.—Mrs. Catherine Ward, widow of Robert E. Ward, former head of the Ward Baking company, left most of her $2,000,000 estate to her four daughters. Her will was filed here.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

MANAGING MEMORY

IT IS observed that the educated have, as a rule, a better memory than the uneducated. The reason for this is obvious.

The one class exercises its capacity for carrying things in its mind and thus gives memory strength, endurance and ability to recall events, names or dates at a moment's notice, while the other class permits memory to become flabby and undependable.

Each individual has within his or her brain a certain amount of retentive power, beyond which he or she cannot go without unusual effort. And if the effort is not put forth regularly, with persistent determination to improve, memory will not of itself make notable progress.

There are, it is true, native differences of retentive power.

One child is from the first capable of retaining impressions of all kinds more easily than others. A child with a good natural ear for musical sounds will be likely to retain sounds and their successions better than another child deficient in this sense-endowment, and so it goes through childhood to old age, with memory playing fast or loose as it has been taught.

Faulty memory, if you go deeply into its cause, you will find very frequently is the result of inattention, especially in adults who have become absorbed in the problems of life to the exclusion of everything else.

Uncommon Sense . . .

By JOHN BLAKE

LET'S NOT DESPAIR

TAKEN generally this world is about what may be expected of it, considering the sort of people who are in it.

Mourning for the dead, dead days of long ago has a sentimental value, but otherwise is pretty useless.

Man was not born to become perfect in a hurry. He isn't perfect now, even after some millions of years of opportunity for development.

But he is more nearly perfect than he was two thousand years ago, or for that matter, a hundred years ago. In other words, he's progressing.

He isn't war-proof yet. He hasn't found any means of settling his biggest quarrels except by taking up arms.

But he doesn't burn witches any longer, and he accords his fellows more right to their opinions than he used to.

Incidentally his morals are better than they were in the time of Rome, and he has done considerable to add

And these usually are the people who habitually complain.

They have ceased to see the sunlight or to move forward. They sit dejectedly at the crossroads, while others pass them and go on their way rejoicing.

A man or woman is not better than his or her memory.

Each may have ability, pleasing manners and good looks, but if he or she is deficient in memory the road will take to nowhere save to disappointment.

The fact is that good memory is at the base of every great success, having for its helpful couriers energy, industry and probity which give to memory a strategic position from which it cannot be shaken, even in critical moments of stress when everything depends on the right move.

He who misallies himself with bad memory, refuses to manage his memory or drill it with utmost care, which he can do by continual practice, allies himself with failure, and in most instances he has nobody to blame for his miserly incapacity and inheritance but his miserable self.

Has Anyone Laughed At You Because —

By ETHEL R. PEYSSER

You Give Too Much of Your Time to Others? How often have people said to you: "You use up so much perfectly good strength doing for others? Why do you? They don't appreciate it!" It may be true that you do, it may be true that some few people do not appreciate what you do, but some do. Anyhow, you have a good habit. None is better than the giving habit. The Good Book says: "Cast thy bread upon the waters, for thou shalt find it. Give a portion to seven, yea, even to eight." And that's only another way of saying if you give a lot you'll get a lot, maybe not in money and things, but in real happiness and satisfaction. Think what sacrifices the Quakers and the people of the various commissions are making in foreign and uncomfortable countries to help the starving!

SO Your Get-away here is: Nothing pays like giving. So you can feel sorry for the chap that laughed at you; he hasn't begun yet to be happy.

WHAT INDUCTANCE MEANS EXPLAINED

Its Cause and Effects Are Here Told in Popular Language for the Novice.

When a conductor cuts a magnetic field a voltage is induced in the conductor. The voltage induced depends for its value on the rapidity with which the conductor cuts the magnetic field. The value of the induced voltage is a function of the rate of cutting, not of the field density, etc.

A conductor carrying a current is surrounded by a magnetic field. If the value of the current be decreased, the magnetic field will decrease. In decreasing, the magnetic field about the conductor will cut the conductor and induce in it a voltage. This induced voltage in a conductor caused by a change in the magnetic field, which was produced by the conductor, is called the electro-motive force of self-induction. The direction of the induced voltage due to self-induction is such as to oppose any change.

Looking at the end of a conductor, if applied current is in a direction away from the observer, a reduction in current will produce an e. m. f. of self-induction that will add to this current flow away from the observer, or being the same direction as the applied voltage. An increase in the flow of the current will increase the magnetic field and an e. m. f. of self-induction will be induced that will oppose the flow of current.

Suppose we consider the magnetic field about a conductor carrying an alternating current. The current alternately flows in one direction and tween two circuits linked by a magnetic field but separated electrically.

Examples of both types of inductance are found in both high and low frequencies. In a radio transmitter the filter reactances are examples of low frequency self-inductance. The filament transformer is an example of mutual inductance. The primary of the filament transformer sets up a magnetic field that is cut by the conductor that forms the secondary of the transformer. In radio frequency circuits a tuning coil depends for its action upon self-induction. The operation of a loose coupler depends upon mutual induction for the transfer of energy from the primary or antenna circuit to the secondary tuned circuit to which the rectifying apparatus is connected.

"Skin effect" is due to self-induction. In a conductor carrying direct current, resistance drop, which can be considered as a back voltage, is constant over the entire cross section of the conductor. The applied voltage then is opposed at any point on the cross section of a conductor by the same back voltage and hence the current flowing distributes itself evenly over the cross section of the conductor.

This is not true in conductors carrying alternating current. There are two voltages that oppose the flow of alternating current in a conductor. First, the back voltage due to resistance, and second, the back voltage induced by self-induction. The magnetic field surrounding the conductor will be strongest at the center of the conductor and weaker at the surface of the conductor. This will cause the induced back e. m. f. to be largest at the center and smallest at the surface of the conductor. Naturally the density of the current that flows will be inversely proportional to this opposing e. m. f. or the least current will flow at the center and the greater current will flow along the surface.

As the frequency of the current is increased, the "skin effect," as it is called, becomes more and more pronounced. Finally at radio frequencies then the other direction. Each time the direction of flow of the current changes, the direction of the magnetic field reverses.

When an alternating current flows in a conductor, the current which is set up by the changing magnetic field is also alternating. Suppose that Fig. 1 represents a graph of the current flowing in the conductor. During the first quarter of the cycle, while the current is increasing from zero at A to a maximum value at B, the magnetic field will build up with the current. The inductive back e. m. f., which depends on the rate of change of flow, will be a maximum at A, where the flux is changing most rapidly, and a minimum at B, where change in flow is zero. Similarly during the other three quarters of a cycle the induced e. m. f. due to induction will be a maximum at C and E and a minimum at D.

The dotted curve then in Fig. 1 represents the e. m. f. of self-induction. Note that there is a phase difference of one-quarter of a cycle, or 90 electrical degrees, between the e. m. f. due to induction and the current producing the magnetic field. This action of the conductor having a back e. m. f. induced in it, when a varying current flows through the conductor is called self-induction.

In other words, self-induction may be defined as the property of an electrical circuit that tends to prevent any change in the value of the circuit flowing through it. The e. m. f. of self-induction is always in such a direction as to prevent any change of current in the circuit. A length of wire wound in the form of a coil called a solenoid has a greater self-induction than the same length of straight. The self-induction of a coil with no iron near the magnetic field is a constant and depends on the physical dimensions of the circuit. The unit of inductance is the henry. An electrical circuit has an inductance of one henry, when a change in the current of one ampere per second will cause a back e. m. f. of one volt.

It has been explained that an ever changing magnetic field surrounds a circuit carrying an alternating current and that this changing magnetic field induces in the circuit a back e. m. f. which opposes any change in the current flowing in the circuit.

If a second electrical circuit is brought within the magnetic field of the first circuit, the second circuit will have a voltage induced in it. The value of the voltage induced in the second electrical circuit will be one volt per 100,000,000 lines of flux cut per second. The direction of the induced voltage in the second circuit will be 180 electrical degrees out of phase with the applied voltage of the first circuit. The phenomenon just described is known as mutual inductance. Self-induction is the reaction of a circuit upon itself. Mutual inductance is the reaction that exists be-

Business Woman Feared She Had Heart Trouble

"Since Tanlac has overcome a bad case of indigestion and nervousness of three or four years' standing for me, my work here in the store is a pleasure, and I am certainly grateful for the good health it has given me," said Mrs. J. W. Pickins, of 516 E. 15th St., Los Angeles, who owns and operates the book store at 219 Mercantile Place.

"I was so run down that I felt miserable all the time. My sleep was broken and restless, I had no appetite, and the gas from undigested food caused my heart to palpitate so I thought I had heart trouble. For a time I had a swelling in my legs, too, and it was an effort for me to get about."

"It is wonderful how Tanlac has given me such perfect relief from these troubles. I eat heartily now, sleep like a child at night, and just feel fine all the time."

Wise is Youth.

A few evenings ago, a little girl, three years old, was enjoying some Mother Goose jingles on her father's knee. Little Bo Peep was being rehearsed and when the place was reached where, in the rhyme, it says "bringing their tails behind them," the father purposely changed it to read this way, "bringing their tails before them," and noticing the surprised look on her face said, "I made a beefstake, didn't I?" She promptly answered, "No, it was a sheepstake."

SEASONABLE GOOD THINGS

A NICE oyster dish a little out of the ordinary and one which may be used for luncheon or Sunday night supper is Escalloped Oysters and Celery.

Allow two dozen oysters to serve four or five persons, one cupful of diced celery parboiled for fifteen minutes in a very little water and the water used with the oyster liquor in the escalloped dish. Drain the oysters and place a layer in a buttered baking dish, cover with celery, a few crushed cracker crumbs and pepper and salt to taste, dotting each layer with bits of butter. Repeat, using but two layers of oysters, finish with celery, crumbs and the oyster and celery liquor, mixed with one-quarter of a cupful of cream. Finish with buttered crumbs and bake long enough to brown the crumbs. More than two layers of oysters in a baking dish is not advisable as the top and bottom layers will be overcooked before the inner layer is cooked.

Quick Squash Biscuits.
Mix and sift two cupfuls of flour with one teaspoonful of salt and three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Rub in two tablespoonfuls of shortening and the yolk of an egg, one-half cupful of cooked rice squash and cold milk to make a mixture to roll. Cut and bake as the ordinary biscuits. Delicious with butter and honey.
